April 23rd, 2020 - a dedicatory inscription on a statue s base would of course have been an essential part of any greek or roman public honorific portrait statue 10 but such inscribed bases were not regularly included in the display of these portraits in their new roman domestic contexts hinting at a functional difference between domestic sculpture and statues in the public sphere 11 perhaps some of the portraits were immediately recognizable to their audience and so needed no identifying tag'
