Digital PCR Quantitation of Muscle Mitochondrial DNA Age April 16th, 2020 - Mitochondrial DNA mtDNA sequence and copy number alterations are implicated in the physiological changes of aging skeletal muscle Studies of mtDNA copy number in aging muscle have found increases decreases or no change Differences in these studies may arise from the small magnitude of change with age ie often less than twofold differences in tissue sampling eg different'

'Mutation of a bHLH transcription factor allowed almond

February 26th, 2020 - The domesticated almond tree has been feeding humans for millennia. Derivation from the wild bitter and toxic almond required loss of the cyanogenic diglucoside amygdalin. Sánchez Pérez et al. sequenced the almond genome and analyzed the genomic region responsible for this shift. The key change turned out to be a point mutation in a transcription factor that regulates production of P450.
